BROADWAY THEATER. The Great American Play, "Paid in Full."

This outlines the story of "Paid in Pull, which will be seen at the Broadway theater this evening under the direction of the Wagenhals & Kemper company.

Act L-it is a summer evening in a Harlem tiat. Time—now, Joseph Brooks, collector of the Latin-American Steamship company, is cleaning off the dinner table and sweeping the floor. He bewalls his lot because Captain Williams, head of the line, has refused to raise his $18 a week, and charges his pretty wife with mute procharges his pretty wife with mute pro-test against the mistake she made when she rejected Jimsy Smith, whose salary as superintendent of the steam-ship line has just been raised to $5,000 a year. The husband goes out in a huff after a fiery socialistic harrangu. Meanwhile Captain Williams calls, with the mother and sister of Dmma, for Mrs. Brooks' dead father was his partner. Joe enters unnoticed. When of Captain Williams says it is a pity. Emma is not better off the spark is resouched. Joe bursts into a passionare it denunciation of his employer. In a platfiring scene Emma comes between A the two and saves her hishard from the blows of the powerful sailor.

Jimsy, the peacemaker, offers to ake them both to the play. Joe corns the invitation as charity, but if Jimsy will go with him as his guest he will go. Then he invites Emma to the thester. He takes a bank note off the day's collections and the curtain falls on a darkened stage as the pair go out the door.

Act H.—Joe and Emma are found in a fashionable hotel. Their change from the little flat is accounted for with Joe's explanation to his wife that the magnanimous and forgiving Captain. Williams has tribled his salary and dated the raise back six months. Then the audience is half prepared for the shock of Jimsy's revelation that Captain Williams, who has never raised Joe's salary, is going over Joe's accounts and has found him a thief. Jimsy offers to do all in his power to square the shortage. The young defaulter confesses his crime to his wife and after their friend is gone he tells for the only chance to save him is for marxid. and after their friend is gone he tells her the only chance to save him is for her to use her wiles on Captain Wil-liams. When she erasps the proposiweakling who stands before her stripped of his manhood, but agrees to plead with the old skipper after his taunt that it was she who drove him to steal.

Act III.—Jimsy tries to settle the shortage with Captain Williams but a million dollars would not do it. Emma comes to the captain full of her mission and dread. The captain tells her with accent on the 'indy' that she is the first lady who has ever been in his aparement. She comes back to her appeal. He guesses with precision that it is her lusbind who has put her up to the visit. Then they come to blunt and open speech until she tells him that he would have to kill her to make a shameful bargain possible.

Act IV puts the finishing touches on the weakling. Husband and wife meet again, but only to part forever when she realizes the depth of his infame and she goes again. again, but only to part forever when she realizes the depth of his infamy, and she goes out with Jimsy in the

BREED THEATER.

"King of the Ring," Great College Sporting Picture

Another attraction added to the miready fine list of pictures now being shown at the Breed theater is the one shown at the Breed theater is the one sutilied "King of the Ring." This was put on Monday evening, when it was discovered that the picture "Incriminating Evidence" had been shown elsewhere in town. This was a happy shought on the part of Manager Charles McNulty, who has succeeded the partnership formerly existing and has bought Mr. Cooper's interest, and the picture is the big sporting hit of the week.

"Incriminating Evidence" is a wonderful picture in itself, but in the cafe scene, for the delectation of the habitues, an exponent of the famous Isadora Duncan classic dances three wild fances which is worth the price of #dmission alone Other feature pictures are "The Prussian Spy," "The Brazilian Ring," while the comedy is supplied in the following films: "Jones' Mother-in-Law" and "Leading the Cops a Chase."

Many people come wholly to hear the splendid music that is offered, feeling amply repaid for that elone. Madam Morelle's beautiful classic song. "Lover and the Bird," is a collection of beautiful bird calls and echoes and leaves the sudience with a strong deleaves the audience with a strong de sire for more. She is a great favorite with the people, and Mr. Delaney, not being a stranger, is received splended-by many times being compelled to re-spond to encores. This entire bill will be changed Thursday, except the big song of Madam Morelle's.
